The Billerica Historical Society was formed in 1894 and incorporated two years later. True to its original mission, the Society not only continues to acquire and preserve items of local interest but also attempts to educate and inform the town's citizens concerning Billerica's rich cultural and architectural heritage. Initially, the Society met at the Bennett Public Library but in 1937 moved its headquarters to its present address at 36 Concord Road. The house at this location, formerly occupied by Rev. Henry Cumings, the fourth minister of Billerica's First Church, from 1763 until his death in 1823, was bequeathed to the Society by Clara E. Sexton, a former member of its Board of Directors.

In addition, the Society owns three other significant historical sites. Two are associated with the Middlesex Canal, and the third with the Revolutionary War. However, the Clara E. Sexton Memorial Museum requires the most maintenance.
